Andrew Willaert is a true counselor to his clients. He believes that strong representation is the product of good listening. He helps his clients understand their options and make informed decisions. Among these clients are privately owned businesses, agriculture producers, banks and individuals, for whom he provides advice and services in the areas of estate planning, farm and business succession planning, probate, real estate and business organizations and transactions.

Andrew's special understanding of agriculture, real estate and organizational matters is a result of their being part of his life from the start. He grew up on a large family farm run by a partnership of five brothers and working with dozens of relatives.

In addition to a burgeoning law practice, Andrew is an active member of his community. He spends much of his free time involved in community organizations and his dedication and involvement in the community led to him being honored as Greater Mankato Growth's 2008 Volunteer of the Year.
