David's skill set and mindset allow him to adjust his methods to achieve your goals. Certain cases and transactions demand a "leave no stone unturned" approach. Others require careful strategy to get the maximum benefit from limited resources. In either scenario, David will do everything within his power to achieve the best possible result.

David has been studying the art and science of advocacy for nearly 30 years. He has competed, coached and judged at every level of mock trial and moot court competition. Rather than specialize in a single area of practice, David has focused his efforts on crafting winning arguments. He represents plaintiffs and defendants in both state and federal courts. He has had extensive success before the Iowa Court of Appeals and the Iowa Supreme Court.

David has combined his academic endeavors with real-world intellectual property experience in the corporate arena, the courtroom and specialized forums involving the Uniform Domain Name Dispute Resolution Protocol (UDRP). He helps clients apply for and maintain trademark and copyright registrations and provides counsel in the many aspects of brand protection.
