A partner in the firm, Kaitlin's practice focuses on assisting clients with tax and estate planning and business succession planning for individuals, families and family owned businesses in industry with a special emphasis in agriculture.

Through her experience in working with matters for family farms to large corporations, Kaitlin has a broad tax and estate planning practice. She helps her clients plan for and manage tax-efficient transfers of wealth that meet each client's unique goals, including health care directives, estate and gift tax planning, simple and complex trusts and guardianships. She also helps families through the process of administering estates and trusts after a family member's death.

Kaitlin is a regular speaker at estate planning and agriculture conferences and events. She writes columns on a regular basis for agriculture and business publications and teaches continuing education courses for her peers. Her vast knowledge of estate planning and tax law combined with her personal attention to detail is acknowledged and appreciated by her clients.

In addition to estate planning, Kaitlin works with corporate law issues and real estate as well as family law issues regarding adoption.
