Believing that strong representation is the product of good listening, Andrew Willaert—a partner at Gislason & Hunter—is a true counselor to his clients. For over 36 years, he has helped his clients understand their options and make informed decisions in the areas of finance and banking, real estate, environmental law and land use and trusts and estates. Personal experience as well as his years of professional experience in farm and small business succession planning, estate and trust planning, probate, real estate, corporate governance and business and real estate transactions, allow Willaert the unique opportunity to help clients determine which legal service will best serve them.

In addition to a burgeoning law practice, Willaert is an active member of his community. Much of his time outside of work is spent serving on local boards and community organizations, including his current posts on the Community Advisory Board of West Bank and the Board of Governors of the Mankato Brewery.

In his free time, Willaert has a wide range of interests to pursue including travel, cycling, golf, reading, watching sporting events, sharing Saturday morning breakfast with friends and spending time with his family.
